

Schematic of the ice–albedo feedback. Because of the high albedo of ice, ice growth increases the reflection of solar radiation at the surface and ice retreat decreases the reflection of solar radiation (the two bottom arrows), with the result that, in the absence of other factors, an initial cooling gets amplified to further cooling and an initial warming gets amplified to further warming.